

Find your love

Good morning. I believe all of you must have been looking forward to the life of the university when you were in the high school. The computer games. The after-school activities. No need to stay up late for the entrance exam to the university. And you can find a partner without worrying about your parents. However, after the freshman year, you found what your teacher in your high school told is all fake. You don't need to stay up late for the high score. However, you still need to stay up late for not failing in the exam. And the colorful after-school activities have become a burden for you.

And after all of these, the most important point is that you are still single, especially when the people around are not. I believe all of you must experience this circumstance: in the evening, when you have been exhausted for the whole day and return to dormitory, there are some many couples kissing, hugging and whispering. All you can do is passing by and having a heavy sign. This kind of person is called eligible, in other word, single dog. Suddenly, you understand one thing: now you are permitted for love, but you are not able to find you true love.

You begin to wear some strange clothes and make some weird hair. Still you can't get anyone's attention. Finally, you have no idea what to do. You begin to search for answers on the Internet: How to find your true love? How to take the first step when you meet someone you crush into at the first sight? How to date someone out when we have acquainted for several months? There are many answers but can't fit your mind. So today, as an experienced expert, I'm going to talk about the three most essential principles that you should never ignore during the course of finding true love to inspire you. I hope that you can overcome your problem with the help of them.

To begin with, the most important point is that your object is appealed by you instead of being pursued by you. To attract someone, to get his or her attention, the first thing you need to do is to improve yourself. I don't mean that you are supposed to take a shower once a month just for acquiring knowledge in the library. Improving yourself is not equal to be absorbed in studying. Of course, supposing you find yourself being more addicted to knowledge than to the love. Just ignore my words. You deserve the title of bachelor. My point is that not only is the score important but also the emotional intelligence matters. In addition to diligence of studying, you need to keep a clean outlook, exercise regularly and always have a passion for anything, which can make you look fresh. All of these aim to develop yourself. When you are outstanding enough, you will acquire his/her attention easily. As a consequence, the capacity of yours is the key element to create the sense of mystery, which leads to attraction.

Besides what I mentioned above, the second law is never confessing as soon as you acquaint the one you love. Confession means directly expressing your love to your target and waiting for an answer. Someone succeed in constructing relationship after the confession while someone don't for the simple reason that they misunderstand the sequence of make a relationship. Simply, the time. The confession is the last step when you pursue someone, not the first step. If you speak your mind out directly after you acquaint our target just now, they could be easily pushed away on account of the embarrassment. The embarrassment is caused for that you are pushing her/him to a choice, whose answer is not clear because they don't know you well. From my perspective, the confession should follow the ambiguity. The couple who succeed in the confession knows exactly the result of it because during the course of ambiguity, they have accepted many signals, which convince them that their target will accept their confession. They know each other well enough to decide. As for the signals, especially for a boy, if your girl agreed to go outside with you alone, it's a significant signal that can prove she has intention for you.

With all these mentioned above, one last thing you should attach your importance to is that don't get into the friend zone. Some youngsters were so afraid to be refused that they don't dare to express their thoughts so that they miss the best opportunity to confess. Thereby, they are regarded as best friend. They are asked to do anything such as doing homework, fetching the mail and etc. They are regarded as free labor meanwhile they are satisfied with it. If you have sacrificed a lot to please the one you love, confess him or her right now or just quit it. Sometimes due to your retreating, he or she may recognize your importance. Just as they said at first, the construction of relationship doesn't depend on the pursuit. On the contrary, it depends on the attraction and charm.

All in all, the courage and the ability is the key factor for us to build a relationship with your target. Everyone can find your love with proper methods. When you take your first step, you will find it's not complicated at all. The true love is no waiting. Go chase it.
