

No person is an island

Human society is developed by the relationship. Imagine what will happen in a world without relationship. Internet will not be devised, the human society may never exist and we will stay in the prehistoric society forever. Admittedly, human is not the strongest and fiercest creatures in the history. However, it's because of the existence of the relationship that human could fight against the survival predicaments and develop such advanced science and technology.

Just as the John Donne said 'no man is an island; everyone is a piece of the continent'. Love, friendship and affection are the most important and essential part in our lives. But there is other relationship in our daily life, such as the relationship between the colleagues and between the teacher and students. We live in the combination of our relationships. We combine with the relationships while the relationships help us.

Just as a Chinese goes, one log cannot prop up a tottering building. For example, Yuan Longping, the creator of the hybrid rice, got all these results by the teamwork. Although he makes the greatest contribution to it, he would achieve nothing without help. There is always a great band behind a great singer. The well management of the relationship can improve the efficiency and get to the achievements more easily.

No man is perfect. During the course of growing up, there are always some barriers and challenges to overcome. In our childhood, there are parents helping us with the survival problems. They cook meals for us and they raise us when we don't have the ability to raise ourselves. In our adolescence, there are teachers who educated us and equipped us with the knowledge and skills to fit into the society. When we got upset, we can talk to our friends and share with them our problems.

Some people manage the relationship in a good way so that they could make great achievements with others' help. Some people ignore the importance of the relationship so that we will achieve nothing for the simple reason that no achievement can be reached by individual. The difficulties are like the sea water and we human are like the land. If we are separate from the main land, we will be easily submerged by the ocean. On the contrary, if we united as a whole. The submersion will never be easy.

However, there does exist some bad relationships in our lives. It's difficult for youngsters to distinguish it from normal relationships. Some young people like to get to the bar or some places to get excitement and fulfill their curiosity. Whereas, this kind of places may let them expose to the dangers of drugs and crimes. Managing our relationship well doesn't mean that we need to attach importance to the relationship with everyone. It means that we are supposed to pay more attention to the relationship that benefits us while we should ignore or avoid the relationship that harm us.

With all these mentioned above, I'm convinced that we are connected to the society by relationships so it's of great importance to maintain a good relationship with others.

My speech is the beautiful lines in the movies that ranks the top 10 in IMDB.

In this speech, I'd like to share with my audience some lines and script in some prestigious movies, through which, I'd like to make more students fall in love with the movies. The story and principle behind the story enable me to learn a lot about some great qualities, which grew me up a lot.

To open my speech, I'd like to ask my audience a question, which is the most impressive line among the movies you have ever watched. In the meantime, I'll set some examples such as the line "I'm the iron man." in the movie <Iron Man> to attract the audience on account of the age of my audience.
