

Find your love

Good morning. I believe all of you must have been looking forward to the life of the university when you were in the high school. The computer games. The after-school activities. No need to stay up late for the entrance exam to the university. And you can find a partner without worrying about your parents. However, after the freshman year, you found what your high school teacher told you is all fake. You don't need to stay up late for the high score. However, you still need to stay up late for not failing in the exam. The colorful after-school activities have become a burden for you.

Besides these, the most important point is that you are still single, especially when the people around are not. I believe all of you must experience this circumstance: in the evening, you have been exhausted for the whole day and return to dormitory. When you walk through the campus, there are so many couples kissing, hugging and whispering. All you can do is passing by and having a heavy sign. This kind of person is called eligible, in other word, single dog. Suddenly, you understand one thing: now you are permitted for love, but you are not able to find your true love.

You begin to search on the Internet: How to find your true love? How to take the first step when you meet someone you crush into at the first sight? How to date someone out when we have acquainted for several months? As an experienced expert, I'm going to talk about three most essential principles that you should never ignore during the course of finding true love.

To begin with, the most important point is that your target is appealed by you instead of being touched by you. To attract someone, to get his or her attention, the first thing you need to do is to improve yourself. And don't lose yourself in the course of pursuit. Improving yourself doesn't mean that you are supposed to take a shower once a month just for acquiring knowledge in the library. Improving yourself is not equal to improve your score. Of course, supposing you find yourself being more addicted to knowledge than to the love. Just ignore my words. You deserve the title of bachelor. My point is that not only is the score important but also other aspects matter, which means developing in all aspects. In addition to diligence of studying, keeping a clean outlook, regular exercise and always maintaining a manner, which can make you look easy to communicate. If you are outstanding enough, you will acquire his/her attention easily. As a consequence, the capacity of yours is the key element to create the sense of mystery, which leads to attraction.

After that, be brave. Go and say hello. Get involved in his/her life. Don't just say 'she is beautiful.' or 'he is handsome.' when passing by.

What's more, the 3rd law is never confessing as soon as you're acquainted. Confession means directly expressing your love to your target and waiting for an answer. Someone succeed in constructing relationship after the confession while someone don't for the simple reason that they misunderstand the sequence of make a relationship. Simply, the time. The confession is the last step when you pursue someone, not the first step. If you speak out your mind directly right after you acquaint our target, they could be easily rejected on account of the embarrassment. The embarrassment is caused for that you are pushing her/him to a dilemma, whose answer is not clear because he/she doesn't know you well. From my perspective, the confession should follow the ambiguity. The couple who succeed in the confession knows exactly the result of confession because during the course of ambiguity, they know each other well enough to decide and they have accepted many signals, which convince them that their target will accept their confession.

With all these mentioned above, one last thing you should attach your importance to is that don't get into the friend zone. Some youngsters were so afraid to be refused that they don't dare to express their thoughts so that they miss the best opportunity to confess. Thereby, they are regard as best friends. They are asked to do anything such as doing homework, fetching the mail and etc. They are regard as free labor meanwhile they are satisfied with it. If you have sacrificed a lot to please the one you love, stop it and confess right now or just quit it. Believe me, I have experience. Sometimes maybe due to your retreating, he or she realize your importance. Just as we said at first, the construction of relationship doesn't depend on the pursuit. On the contrary, it depends on the attraction and charm.

All in all, the courage and the ability is the key factor for us to build a relationship with the pursuing. With proper methods, everyone can find their love. Taking your first step, you will find it's not complicated at all.

The true love is no waiting. Go chase it.
