

Find your love

I believe all of you must have been looking forward to the life of the university when you were in the high school. The after-school activities. No need to stay up late for the entrance exam to the university. And you can find a partner without worrying about your parents. However, after your freshman year, you found what your teacher in your high school told is all fake. You don't need to stay up late for the high score. Instead, you still stay up late for not failing in the exam. And the colorful after-school activities have become a burden for you. And after all of these, the most important point is that you are still single, especially when the people around are not. This kind of person is called eligible, to be specific, single dog.

So you begin to search for answers on the Internet. How to find your true love? How to take the first step when you meet someone you love at the first sight? How to date someone out when we have acquainted for several months? As an experienced expert, today I'm going to talk about the three most essential principles that you should never ignore during the course of finding true love.

To begin with, the most important point is that your object is attracted by you instead of being pursued by you. Therefore, to attract someone, the first thing you need to do is improving yourself in all aspects. I don't mean that you are supposed to take a shower once a month just for studying. Improving yourself is not equal to just having a high score. Of course, supposing you find yourself being addicted to knowledge. Just ignore my words. You deserve the title of bachelor. Not only is the score important but also the emotional intelligence matters. In addition to diligence of studying, you need to keep a clean outlook and exercise regularly, which can make you look fresh. Everyone prefer to make a relationship with fresh people. As a consequence, the capacity of yours is the key element for finding a partner.

Besides the principle above, the second law is never vindicating as soon as you acquaint the one. Vindication means directly expressing your love for your goal. Someone succeed after the vindication while someone don't for the simple reason that they misunderstand the sequence of make a relationship. The vindication is the last step of the whole course, not the first step. If we speak our mind out directly after we acquaint our target, they could be easily pushed away on account of the embarrassment. From my perspective, the vindication should follow the ambiguity. The couple who succeed in the vindication knows exactly the result of it because during the course of ambiguity, they have accepted many signals, which convince them that their target will accept their vindication. So as for the signals, especially for a boy, if your girl agreed to go outside with you alone, it's a significant signal that can prove she has intention for you.

With all these mentioned above, one last thing you should pay attention to is that don't get into the friend zone. Some youngsters were so afraid to be refused that they don't dare to express their thoughts so that they miss the best opportunity to vindicate. So they are regard as best friend. They are asked to do anything such as doing homework, fetching the mail and etc. They are regard as free labor and they are satisfied with it. If you have sacrifice a lot to please the one you love, vindicate him or her of just quit it. Sometimes due to the retreating of you, he or she maybe recognize your importance. Just as they said at first, the construction of relationship doesn't depend on the pursuit. On the contrary, it depends on the attraction and charm.

All in all, the courage and the ability is the key factor for us to build a relationship with your target. When you take your first step, you will find it's not complicated at all. The true love is no waiting. Go chase it.